

Home Theater & Hi-Fi Daily News

Thursday 11 January 2007

CES Las Vegas 2007: Day two report

Day Two at CES and we concentrate on the Specialty Audio section over at the Venetian and Sands convention centre. And the accent is very much on specialty; a plethora of ultra high-end hi-fi brands, demonstrating some deeply luxurious equipment. Of course, this wasn't on the main halls, but the rooms were well appointed and acoustically fine. It was definitely a hi-fi specialist's paradise.

Perhaps the most exotic speakers on show were the King's Audio electrostatics. These Chinese-made panel speakers [edit: Emperor] were built to look like Chinese screens and were making unexpectedly good sounds.

King's Audio panels